

Your Community Town Crier

From medieval England to the American colonies, town criers had a very important job – spreading news to the public. Back when they performed this service, many people could not read or write. Newspapers were not readily available.

This newspaper is your modern town crier, and you do not have to wait for someone to walk by your house loudly proclaiming the news. You can read this newspaper whenever you choose, in print or online. You have much more news at your fingertips than a town crier could possibly announce.

This newspaper tells you what you need to know about your community – what is happening, what your neighbors think about a local issue, what is for sale, where to find a job and what is on television tonight.

Every day, it delivers all the news you need. Look through these pages or visit this newspaper's Web site. Find an issue facing your local government. Find a story about changes in local schools. Find out results of local sporting events.
